

Assessing the Credibility of Internet sites about _____ (topic)

Name of Site and URL: _____ Your Name(s): _____

	Reasons for Confidence		Reasons for Doubting
	Evidence from site	Implications for Believability	Evidence from site	Implications for Believability
Authorship What do we know of the creators of the site that might affect the believability of its contents?
Sponsorship What do we know of the individual(s) or group(s) who sponsored the site that might affect the believability of its contents?
Sources of ideas What do we know about how information was obtained and verified that might affect the believability of its contents?
Indicators of care Does the site's presentation style, tone and format provide clues about the believability of its contents?

From: Roland Case, "Making Critical Thinking an Integral Part of Electronic Research." In School Libraries in Canada: Library Skills ... Sowing Seeds for Lifelong Learning. Vol. 22(4). 2003. p.15. © The Critical Thinking Consortium